The Morningsider

The President's Pen

For a time now, we must all concentrate on our Fine Arts Educational building project. We need the concern, the suggestions, the prayers and the gifts of every loyal Morningsider.

We have launched a campaign to raise $1,250,000 to finance the erection of this much needed building. Other articles in this issue will define the project in greater detail.

A program has been set in motion to help raise salaries and enlarge the faculty and thus remain competitive with industry, government and tax subsidized universities. This program (M. D. C.) continues to grow under the guidance of Walter Olsen.

Our renovation work has received more than $150,000 worth of attention in recent months. Enough of that for now.

The men's dormitory addition is under way through a loan from the Federal Housing and Home Finance agency. We plan to fill it next fall. The North Iowa conference of the Methodist church is taking the necessary steps, through committees, to help with a building—probably a women's dormitory. Final action will be taken in June.

The students are giving $15 per student per semester to help finance a proposed, lovely, new student center and food service. Some $42,000 has been collected toward this project, and intensive work is being done in preparation.

We covet the prayerful concern of every friend of the college.

Sincerely,
J. Richard Palmer

ON THE COVER

Students at Morningside today know Ira Gwinn as a man of many titles—associate professor of physics, registrar, administrative assistant to the president.

When they become seniors, however, they realize—as have seniors for many years—that the title perhaps best loved by Prof. Gwinn is that of Big Chief Gwinn, giver of the Tribe of the Sioux oath.

Time is coming soon when the Big Chief will don the gear again to conduct another band of neophytes into the tribe. He was holding a trial run at his desk in Lewis hall when the Morningsider photographer tracked him down.

Chief Gwinn's next official performance will be at the Alumni dinner June 4.

CAMPUS NEWS

Goldwater to Head Commencement Slate; Exercises Scheduled Sunday

Sen. Barry Goldwater, popular Arizona republican, will be the speaker at commencement exercises June 5. Goldwater is known for his often provocative stands on current issues and his address will be a highpoint of commencement festivities.

A change in scheduling of commencement activities this year will have baccalaureate services and commencement exercises both on the same day—Sunday—rather than on consecutive days—Sunday and Monday—as has been the custom.

Goldwater

Reason for the switch is convenience of visitors who find it difficult to come to the campus for more than the weekend.

Baccalaureate services will be at 10 o'clock in the new Grace Methodist church and commencement exercises will be scheduled at mid-afternoon in Allee gymnasium.

Saturday, June 4, will be alumni day as usual with reunion luncheons for classes ending in 5 and 0 at noon in Dimmitt hall. The alumni dinner will be held in the evening. Direct mail notices of exact times will be sent to all alumni.

Persons wishing to stay in Dimmitt hall may do so for $1.50 total cost excluding meals. Breakfasts may be bought in the dormitory cafeteria dining hall.

Launch Fine Arts Structure Drive

A drive to raise $1,250,000 for construction of a fine arts educational building on the Morningside campus is under way.

The campaign is part of a larger effort to raise $3,000,000 for construction which will meet the anticipated building needs of the college for the foreseeable future. The projected plan calls for a student center and additions to the men's and women's dormitories in addition to the fine arts structure.

Construction was begun on the men's dormitory last fall, and it will be ready for occupancy this fall. Financing for this structure is being aided by a government loan.

Financing of the women's dormitory and the student center will be done in part by aid from the North Iowa conference of the Methodist church and in part by a $15-per-semester, self-imposed fee now being collected from students.

A description and three illustrations of the proposed fine arts building are found on pages 6 and 7.

An impressive roster of Sioux City business and professional men and women are contributing moral and material support to the campaign. Irving F. Jensen, contractor and a trustee of the college, is general chairman of the drive.

Cochairmen are George A. Neal, chairman of the board of Iowa Public Service Company; Harold A. Jacobsen, executive vice president of Albertson and Co. and Duane S. Kidder of Miller-Kidder Co.

Mr. Jensen keynoted the drive in a pre-campaign statement:

"As a citizen of Sioux City, I am glad we have Morningside college and I want to see her grow . . . what happens there happens to all of us in some way, however remote. Every student leaving Morningside college is a product of our influence, and to me, this is a challenging responsibility."

Palmer: Need Great

President J. Richard Palmer pointed up the need in this way:

"Many good students will hesitate to enroll in a college, no matter how excellent the faculty, if they see antiquated, inadequate classroom space in use. In such quarters the effectiveness of the best teacher is impaired."

"The most critical need we now must meet as we attempt to fulfill our obligations toward your young people and those of your neighbors who are now seeking college entrance is to provide adequately for our fine arts educational program. I hope you will join in this worthy project."

Many Comment On "Mac" Fund

Many enthusiastic comments from alumni on the MacCollin Memorial organ project have been received by the college alumni office and by Walter Olsen, assistant to the president.

The drive is in its final stages and contributions from alumni will be welcomed to insure further the success of the project.

The organ, a $38,000 instrument manufactured by the Cassavant Co., of Canada, will be installed in the new Grace Methodist church and will be used by the college for recital instruction and practice purposes.

Samples of comments received follow.

"I am delighted that you have asked me to lend my name for this fine memorial to the MacCollins. Like all old Morningsiders and particularly those who have worked with the MacCollins in any way, I feel that they have meant much to the school as well as to each of us personally."

"I sang in the Grace church choir for seven years. I was a charter member of the Morningside a cappella choir and also sang in the men's glee club for four years. In addition, I played in the college band and in the Sioux City symphony. My appreciation of good music, learned under the MacCollins at Morningside, brings me constant pleasure."

"It is indeed a pleasure to contribute to the MacCollin Memorial organ and I'm so happy to pledge what I feel I can promise . . . Nothing could ever pay for all the intangibles the "Macs" gave to me!"

"Morningside gave me two outstanding things which have had a profound influence on what little success I have enjoyed—a very fine training under Mr. Mac and a wonderful wife. I am extremely grateful for both."

MISS JACOBS RESIGNS; NAME ACTING DEAN

Fine Arts Structure to include Little Theater, Large Auditorium, Classroom and Gallery Areas

Ample facilities for the teaching of art, speech and music at Morningside are represented by the building in the three drawings on this page.

It is the fine arts educational building for which a campaign will be launched to raise $1,250,000—the estimated cost of construction of the structure.

The central area will be occupied by an auditorium accomodating approximately 1,500 persons in permanent main floor and balcony seating. The stage—36 feet deep by 60 feet wide—will be adequate for staging all types of college music and drama productions and traveling attractions. The auditorium will meet another key need of the college—a place large enough for the entire student body to assemble.

To the right of the main auditorium area will be a little theater seating 300 persons for smaller amateur productions and for convocations involving only a portion of the student body.

The lower floor to the left of the main auditorium will be occupied by music rehearsal and listening rooms and offices and by the art education and gallery area. An outdoor plaza is also located here.

In the upper story to the left of the auditorium will be classrooms and listening rooms for the speech department and a 17 feet by 45 feet area for painting.

This facility will replace the world war 2 barracks in which the speech and art and portions of the music department have been operating for the last 15 years. It will help to maintain the standard of art education at Morningside that many believe is somewhat in advance of other liberal arts colleges.

The building will also give Sioux City another fine auditorium for musical and theatrical productions—possibly resulting in the attraction of more of these performances to the city.
