Morningside Proud of Paul and Elizabeth MacCollin

The New York Yankees are a great team. So are the Mac Collins of Morningside. A greater team, perhaps, than some realize. For they have built the Morningside College Conservatory of Music into an institution that has gained, first, regional interest, then, midwestern reputation and finally, national renown.

When the Mac Collins came out of Oberlin College, Morningside and Sioux City were widely known for other qualities, but this college and this city were not on the musical map. They needed a Moses to lead them from the musical wilderness. And lo, two Moseses appeared—Mr. Mac and Mrs. Mac.

What happened in the intervening years between then and now is a matter of record. There followed a renaissance of music, not only at the college, but also throughout the city and the adjoining territory. The conservatory grew; the territory from which it drew was correspondingly enriched. A few of the outstanding organizations attributed to the efforts of the Mac Collins are the symphony orchestra, the civic concert course, the famous college a cappella choir and the Okoboji summer music camp. From the conservatory of music musically-skilled Morningside graduates went out in increasing numbers to every section of the country; the scope of the influence of the Mac Collins at Morningside became immeasurable.

For you Morningsiders who were not so fortunate as to be able to attend the 25th anniversary performance of Handel's Messiah at the past Christmas season, we give you this picture, a picture that stirred one of the greatest audiences ever to hear the Messiah in Sioux City. On the podium stood Paul Mac Collin, cool and poised in the maturity of his music, still youthful appearing (the years seem to leave few marks on the Macs) and at the peak of his directing genius as he drew the utmost from a huge city-wide chorus; on the platform was Elizabeth Mac Collin—"Mrs. Mac"—also poised, beautifully gowned, smiling in her delightful manner as she recognized former pupils here and there among the audience that packed Grace Church, and later singing her solo roles with a talent, warmth and facility that seemed to eclipse all her past excellent performances.

It was a grand performance by a grand pair, and there were lumps in the throats of those who knew the Macs well and realized the import of the moment, representing as it did 25 years of faithful, patient, brilliant work. Music critics of the Sioux City newspapers echoed that sentiment.

This is but one incident. There are scores of others pointing up the fact that Morningside and Sioux City have been truly fortunate in having the services of the MacCollins.

After a recent exceptionally brilliant concert performance by the Sioux City Symphony orchestra, one of the solo artists, Pierre Luboshutz, of the famous Luboshutz-Nemenoff piano team, exclaimed in praise of the orchestra, "Never have I heard Mozart as I have tonight. You do not know what you have here!"

His spontaneous comment contains a thought applicable here—Morningsiders have been so "spoiled" by good music that we perhaps "don't know what we have here." What we have is the best.

And, again, it's pertinent to recall that one of the founders of this great Sioux City symphony orchestra is none other than Paul MacCollin.

The fame of the Morningside a cappella choir is too well established to call for emphasis here. But as a gesture to pleasant nostalgic memories of some of you Morningsiders, we recall that the choir and its tours were a broadening and outgrowth of the old glee club and madrigal trips. Remember them?

Now the choir (time out, of course, for war) stands among the few best in the nation; its director and his unique arrangements are widely admired, while one of the greatest musical publishing firms has founded a Morningside Choir Library series, which will have national distribution. Some of the compositions published to date are MacCollin arrangements.

Both Paul and Elizabeth MacCollin are voice teachers of tremendous ability. They have that uncanny knack of voice analysis, each voice being an individual problem requiring specialized treatment to develop it to full beauty and maturity. At this work, the "Macs" are past masters. Among their former pupils are concert singers, operatic performers, heads of conservatories, voice instructors, choir directors and "just plain singers" scattered throughout the country, carrying on the character-building, soul-lifting message of music in the traditional

Elizabeth MacCollin

MacCollin manner. This influence extends from one generation to the next; in time, thousands upon thousands are benefited.

Delightful personalities make the work of Paul and Elizabeth MacCollin even more effective. They're friendly, easy to know, charming to meet and grand to remember. They deserve all the credit and acclaim that years of painstaking work have brought them in this, still the prime of their careers.

CONCERT BRILLIANT PERFORMANCE

The fifth concert on the Sioux City Civic Concert Course was another highlight in musical circles. Such exquisite piano playing by the artists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, duo-pianists, has never before been heard in Sioux City.

The orchestra excelled in their performance under the baton of Henri Pensis, conductor. Mr. Pensis' interpretation of Mozart's Concerto in E-Flat for two pianos was outstanding, while the ensemble of artists and orchestra was technically perfect. An ovation from the enthusiastic audience to the visiting artists and the orchestra was given after this number.

Appointed Designer

Harlan Dewell, '40, of Flushing, N. Y., writes Dr. Graber that he feels he has received an opportunity of a lifetime in being appointed to design the wing of the new JRM-1, the ship that was ordered built by the Navy after the successful completion of the long cargo hauls of the "Mars." Harlan states that although the Mars is a wonderful ship, this new design will improve it greatly. Practically the whole ship is being restyled and turning out the final design and all the production drawings means working to a very close schedule, in order to have four of them flying in 1944 as the plans specify.

In his letter he expresses to Dean Graber his very deep appreciation of the self-confidence which Dr. Graber inspired in him while a student in his classes and that whatever success he has achieved has been due to Dean Graber's faith in his ability to overcome any obstacle.

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES

Agora sponsored a party on February 18 to initiate the second floor recreation room of the "Barn." This completed the initiation of both floors, the first floor having been initiated with the Agora Christmas party which was held in the dining room before the coeds started eating there.

Chairman for the "Fun Night" was Dorcas Knapp and refreshment chairman was Lois Helm.

ALUMNUS CREATES SCHOLARSHIP FUND

All Morningsiders will rejoice with the Campus over the receipt of a $10,000 scholarship and loan fund gift from Dwight W. Winkelman of Syracuse, New York.

The contracting and engineering firm of Dwight W. Winkelman, which is engaged in far-flung construction activities, also includes Mr. Lawrence Cain, graduate of Morningside in 1928, as engineer.

The name of Winkelman is familiar to a legion of friends and classmates at Morningside, for Dwight's two sisters, Eleanor and Frances, and his brother, Ewart, attended Morningside. Eleanor, Mrs. William McCurdy, graduated in 1916. She is working on her Master's Degree at Syracuse University and acting as secretary to Dean Powers.

Ewart (Bill) graduated in 1922 and has a stock farm near Lohrville, the family home.

Frances, ex '26, is Mrs. Edgar Hellweg, of Garden City, New York.

Dwight completed his Junior year at Morningside in 1924 and was graduated in Business Administration from the University of Iowa in 1925. He is married, his wife being the former Marguerite Powers of Chicago and has two sons, "Cappy" age 9 and Peter, age 2.

It would seem that the same sprit of friendliness and initiative which characterized Dwight, known as "Dutch" to his classmates in college, has made him highly successful in business. "Dutch" was everyone's friend, as is proven by the statement

NOTICE!

Due to complications, the meeting of Morningsiders scheduled for February has been postponed until later this spring.

from the college annual of his time: "We all like him because there isn't anything in him not to like."

News of his gift provoked comments from his former coach and a classmate, "Saundy" remarking: "He was the kind of a chap that all the others talked about," and Les Davis, fondly reminiscing, exclaiming "Gee, he had fine parents! We sure used to have good times visiting at their home in Lohrville."

Every Morningsider will be pleased to show his appreciation to Dwight for this expression of loyalty to his Alma Mater, as will every future Morningsider who will benefit from his scholarship.

QUOTA SYSTEM INAUGURATED

In a meeting of the inter-sorority council recently the quota system was introduced as a bill and passed. The system provides that each sorority pledge only a certain maximum number of girls, this number being the same for each sorority and being set each year in accordance with the number of girls eligible. The purpose of the quota is to equalize the membership of the groups and to distribute the leadership more evenly among the three sororities. Rushing was started when each sorority entertained a group of freshmen girls at tea. The formal rushing season will begin on March 22 and continue until April 1.

Do You Remember When?

Traditions make up an interesting part of the life of every college, and Morningside is no exception. During this fiftieth anniversary year it is fitting that we refresh our memories on some of the traditions which have become a part of Morningside history.

This month it is especially appropriate that we mention one of the biggest events of the year, the annual cross-country run to Floyd Monument and back, which was always held on Washington's birthday. The contestants often sprinted over ice and snow in remarkable time.

The first run, held in 1906, was won by Ray Chapman who also held the state record for the mile. In 1914 V. Lavelly broke the record held by Allen Berkstresser of 19 minutes and 5 seconds by negotiating the distance in 18 minutes and one second, which record still stands.

SAILOR

Lt. (j. g.) Alice Katherine Morrison, graduated from Peterson high school. She received her B. A. degree from Morningside College in 1934, and later taught two years at Sibley, Iowa, and four at Manchester, Iowa. After attending A. I. B. Des Moines, Iowa, she was Secretary to Loan

BASKETBALL

The Pre-engineers basketball club of Morningside journeyed to Wayne, Nebraska, on February 12. They were defeated by a score of 47 to 26 by Wayne State Teachers College in a basketball tilt.

The Morningsiders were unable to stop the Wildcats as the first quarter score which was 24 to 3 in favor of Wayne indicates. The second period of the game found the visiting team holding their opponents and Wayne did not hit the basket for a single point. The Pre-engineers brought their score up to 10 which made the half-time score 24 to 10, still in favor of Wayne. During the last two periods of the tilt Wayne doubled their half-time score and Morningside doubled theirs and added six points.

Bob Bornholdt and Duane Hawthorne played outstanding ball. The boys who made the journey were John Griffen, Leon Shortenhaus, Ray Goaghagen, Duane Hawthorne Paul Ralston, Stanley Lamfers, Bob Bornholdt, Everett Barr, James Fribourgh, and Richard Johnson.

FORMER FACULTY

Muriel Joy Hughes, '25, was granted a Ph. D. from Columbia University last summer. Her thesis, dedicated to her father and mother, is entitled, "Women Healers in Medieval Life and Literature."

Muriel is an English instructor at the University of Vermont in Burlington, Vermont. Among the A.A.F. boys stationed there she met a former Morningsider, Don Allen, ex '45, and writes that Don spoke in glowing terms of his work in music with Professor MacCollin, Mr. Reistrup and Miss Woodford.

Miss Edwarda Metz, former instructor in piano in the Conservatory and now instructor at Mary Baldwin College in Stanton, Va., is enjoying her work and life in the south very much.

Miss Grace Anderson, former social director at the dormitory and instructor in the English department, is teaching in the Junior College at Coleraine, Minn.

Miss Helen Loveland is convalescing at her home at 3607 Peters, after being ill in the Methodist Hospital for a few weeks.

Dr. Clarence Tucker Craig, '15, son of former President Craig, professor of New Testament in the graduate school of Theology at Oberlin, O., has an article entitled "Love" in an issue of "Religion in Life."

Leon E. Hickman Reports Living Endowment Progress

The Alumni Living Endowment movement is in its third year. The alumni movement has for its annual goal an increase in the number of participants and the aggregate amount of contributions over the previous year. Seventy-seven alumni contributed $1600 in cash, or $32,000 of Living Endowment, in 1942; while 154 alumni contributed $2,956 in cash, or $59,120 in Living Endowment, in 1943. If the number of participating alumni doubled in 1943 and the aggregate gifts increased 85%, it would seem reasonable to expect the same alumni and 100 more to contribute $5,000 this year, and thereby build our Living Endowment to $100,000. These figures and estimates are exclusive of the gifts of Sioux City alumni through the Sioux City campaign, which raised our totals for last year to 216 contributors and $6,484 in cash.

The 1944 campaign starts March 1 and ends at Commencement time. The purpose of the campaign is to enroll additional alumni in the program. No campaign is necessary for those already participating because the basic assumption of the Living Endowment is that it represents a cash contribution continued annually until circumstances necessitate a change. The present participants will continue to make their annual payments on whatever schedule they have arranged with Clarence J. Obrecht, '18, the Treasurer of the Fund.

A framed Living Endowment bond is issued to each participating alumnus and is kept current by annual receipt stickers. The application for the bond and the document itself specifies that the participant may withdraw if his circumstances change.

This is a difficult year for the Alumni Committee. One of its members, David L. Wickens, '18, is in military service. The others are operating under wartime schedules which have added greatly to their duties. It would simplify the work of bringing this story to the alumni if every interested person, immediately upon reading this article, would sign an application for his bond without the necessity of solicitation by some classmate. An application is enclosed. If you are already enrolled, get a neighboring alumnus to use it.

The alumni Living Endowment movement is only part of a broad program to bring Morningside and her alumni closer together. This tangible alumni interest in the college has made possible a splendid Alumni Secretary, Mrs. Florence M. Kingsbury, '18. She has created the greatly improved Morningsider. Aroused alumni interest has made possible the nomination of alumni members of the Board of Trustees by the alumni themselves, and the election of alumni officers by national ballot. It has added strength to the Commencement reunions and to the Homecoming programs. Living Endowment income made possible $1,000 for library books last year.

There is much more to be done as wartime restrictions make further advances possible. A new alumni directory should be published and distributed at the earliest possible moment. The present addresses of all ex-students are being ascertained and added to our alumni rolls, for we recognize no distinction in this program. An alumni school at Commencement time, at which selected professors may give a series of talks on problems within their respective fields is envisioned. Much more will be done to promote class reunions both at Commencement and Homecoming. A board of alumni visitors to make an annual visit to the college is a possibility. We can accomplish unlimited things to strengthen the college and to keep her forever enshrined in our hearts. Most, if not all, of these matters will be worked out between the Alumni Association and the College. The Living Endowment Committee is merely an activating agency of the Alumni Association.

We mention our objectives to emphasize that the Living Endowment program is a means to an end that is at once of value not only to the college but to everyone who has ever attended our school.

Your participation in the Living Endowment program is an investment in the youth of today and in the college of your youth. It will add to the richness of your own college ties.

Will not every interested alumnus act promptly and become a part of such a strong alumni interest in Morningside that her Fiftieth Anniversary may indeed be a time of great significance!
