MORNINGSIDE COLLEGE RECEIVES GRANTS

ROADMANS GO EAST

Dr. Earl A. Roadman spoke at a symposium held in connection with the inauguration of Dr. Melvin Hyde as president of Evansville College, Evansville, Indiana. Dr. Roadman spoke on "The Church and Christian Liberal Education."

From Indiana Dr. and Mrs. Roadman went to Washington to spend Thanksgiving Day with their sons, Charles and Keene and their families.

In New York the Roadmans were guests at a tea for Morningside Alumni at which Eleanor Winkelman McCurdy and Frances Winkelman Hellweg were hostesses.

Mr. and Mrs. Derwood Beck of Detroit entertained the Roadmans and the Morningside Alumni of that area at a tea in their home.

In Chicago a dinner was arranged by Don and Marie Bergquist Widler for the Morningsiders of that area to meet with the Roadmans.

Library Work Begins

The work on the conversion of the old Alumni gymnasium into a library was begun the first week in January, and is expected to be finished by June 1.

In the new library study material will be in four divisions, fine arts and natural sciences will be located on the ground floor, social sciences on the main floor, the humanities section on the mezzanine. There will be two sound proof listening rooms with high fidelity and recording equipment, two conference rooms, a seminar room, a library staff room, an audio visual laboratory, projection room, kitchenette, recreational reading alcove, faculty study room, and a chamber to house the records of the Northwest Iowa Conference of the Methodist Church.

FORD FOUNDATION GRANT

Morningside College was included in the college grants recently announced by the Ford Foundation. The gift is in the amount of $154,800, and is designated for endowment with the yearly interest to be used for faculty salaries.

GRANT FROM ESSO

Morningside College was one of four Iowa colleges to receive a grant from the Esso Foundation, recently organized by Standard Oil of New Jersey and affiliated companies.

Morningside received $2,000 in the form of an unrestricted grant for undergraduate education.

The Iowa schools were among 193 privately supported institutions among which $566,000 was divided.

$35,000 BEQUEST RECEIVED

Morningside College is the recipient of a $35,000 bequest from the estate of Mrs. Hazel Straub Harstad of Evanston, Illinois. Mrs. Harstad was the widow of Oscar N. Harstad, a former vice president of the Milwaukee Road. She attended Morningside in 1904 and 1905. Mrs. Harstad died on October 18.

The will specified that the bequest be called the O. N. Harstad fund, and that no more than $5,000 of the money could be spent in any one year.

RADIO HONOR FOR DON STONE

Don Stone ('51), Sioux City radio and television announcer, was selected in a nationwide search to substitute for Don McNeill as the master-of-ceremonies on the Breakfast Club. He will take over the network program on January 11 when McNeill takes a short vacation.

Don Stone has been with KSCJ radio station since 1942 and on television programs since KTIV went on the air. He is in demand for personal appearances as master-of-ceremonies, and has lent his talent in that line on many occasions to Morningside Alumni affairs.
