ON OUR COVER... COMMENCEMENT

Morningside's 1971 Spring Commencement Exercises will again be held in Sioux City's Grandview Park, and the scene will be much like our cover photo of last year's event. The class of '71 will receive their diplomas on Saturday, May 15, at the park's bandshell. The commencement program will begin at 3 p.m.

Speaker for the Commencement Exercises will be Bishop Roy C. Nichols, Resident Bishop of the United Methodist Church for the Pittsburgh, Pa. area.

Baccalaureate services will be held at 10 a.m. on the day of Commencement. Speaker for the 10 a.m. services will be Bishop Frank H. Greteman of the Sioux City diocese of the Roman Catholic Church.

Graduating seniors will be inducted into the Tribe of the Sioux at the annual Alumni/Senior Dinner at 6:30 p.m. in the Commons. The dinner will also feature the presentation of Alumni Awards, recognition of the reunion classes and entertainment by the Faculty Players.

No. 2

Dear Morningsider,

After serving as your President for almost five months, I thought you'd be interested in some of the activities of your Association to date. Of course, the more obvious are the Prospective Student Night and Alumni Basketball Night, successfully completed I might add, and the upcoming Alumni Night at the Theater on April 20. However, one of the items of much discussion this year has resulted in a change in the dues structure, which should help explain why you haven't received any notice this year. You will be receiving further information on this change later. In the meantime, we urge your support of this year's Annual Alumni Fund, which closes May 31, 1971.

Plans are well underway for the Reunion Weekend, which falls considerably earlier this year due to the change in the college calendar. Please take note of the schedule of activities listed elsewhere in this issue. Since the Baccalaureate and Commencement are on Saturday, May 15, we have decided to combine the Reunion activities with the Alumni Senior Dinner that evening. Please start planning now to attend this gala affair, especially if you are a member of any of the Reunion Classes!

We welcome your ideas and suggestions at all times! We want to serve you, the members of the Alumni Association, in your best interest.

Thank you,

Bruce M. Kolbe '60
President
Morningside Alumni Association

The New Curriculum . . . by Dr. John Lawrence

Editor's Note . . .

The molding of a new curriculum plan for Morningside College has been a task demanding countless hours of study and discussion by the members of the Central Planning Committee. The major actions have been taken by the faculty in the implementing of a vastly changed system. Dr. John Lawrence, who is serving as co-ordinator for the work of the Central Planning Committee, takes a comprehensive look at the new curriculum in the article below. He tells of the rationale of the committee in making the recommendations that were approved by the faculty. Dr. Lawrence is in his fifth year on the Morningside faculty. He is chairman of the Department of Philosophy and holds the rank of associate professor.

Morningside College has a new curriculum. After months of study, prolonged committee sessions and faculty meetings, Morningside has adopted changes that will be reflected in our offerings for the 1971-1972 academic year.

In the December 1970 issue of The Morningsider, Professor J. M. Miller reviewed the broad range of considerations that must be attended to in planning significant curricular modification — graduation requirements, teaching methods, advising relationships, grading procedures and student responsibility were all mentioned. We believe that our new program deals substantively with each of these areas of concern and should result in a superior educational experience for our students.

In considering the possibilities open to Morningside and our role as a small private college, we decided that we could more fully realize our potential if we were to allow students to follow more individualized programs of study organized around their interests and aims for self-development.

We also believed that in an institution of our size, students are capable of more fully sharing responsibility in the planning of academic programs. We believed it possible, given proper encouragement, guidance and structure, to enrich the learning process by moving outside the boundaries of the classroom.

We agreed that we should develop a more positive grading system, which would emphasize achievement more than failure, while still giving students an accurate sense of their academic standing.

In addition to these principles, we were convinced that we should do a much more thorough job of evaluating the effectiveness of our programs and maintain a greater willingness to change when the need becomes apparent.

Some features of the new curriculum growing out of these convictions are described below.

CHANGES IN THE CORE CURRICULUM

“Core curriculum” has traditionally referred to the fixed group of course requirements for graduation. Anyone who has attended Morningside knows that our core requirements were very heavy, involving a minimum of two years of prescribed academic study.

Students at Morningside (and at other schools) have charged, with some justification, that the college has been guilty of “mass producing” graduates without regard to their individual capabilities or needs. They have told us that “forced feeding” has little value in the realm of intellect and that much of what is taught and learned in this way is of minimal and at best, transitory significance.

Students have consistently asked that the realm of free choice be enlarged. They argue that they are old enough to vote, to get married, to serve in the armed services. Why then, should a college faculty collectively impose a set of educational requirements on another group of adults?

One student, who was meeting certification requirements for teaching, as well as the prescribed courses for the core and for the major and the minor, came to her senior year and found that she had room in her schedule for one elective course for her entire four years of study. She was prompted to remark, “I have fulfilled all of your requirements, but I have fulfilled hardly any of mine.”

As a result of hearing some of these student voices asking for more intellectual freedom and flexibility in their course of studies, the Central Planning Committee and the faculty voted to abolish all of the existing course requirements for graduation. This means that a student is no longer required to take a foreign language, Western Civilization, philosophy etc. as a pre-condition of graduation. The new requirements are that a student take one course in each of five areas (no individual course is specified).

1. Freshman Seminar (one course):

This course, which will be offered in a great variety of topics by individual professors and administrators, is designed to give the freshman a significant learning experience in an area of his personal curiosity.

"We are asking the student to use his imagination..."

In the past, we believe that we compelled the student to wait too long before granting the opportunity to study a subject for which he has genuine personal affinity. It is our hope that this course will make the freshman year more exciting and of greater academic value.

2. Area Distribution Requirement (3 courses): To assure that the student has some acquaintance with different major areas of learning, the curriculum has been divided into four areas in which the student must take at least one course: Fine Arts, Humanities, Natural Science, and Mathematics and Social Sciences.

The Freshman Seminar will fall in one of these areas. The student must take courses to be selected from a wide range of offerings, in each of the remaining three curricular areas.

Upper Level Seminars similar to the Freshman Seminar will be offered. Professors will be teaching courses on topics of personal scholarly interest and inviting students to share in the pursuit of understanding. Many regular course offerings will also fit the distribution requirement.

3. Student Initiated Experience (SIE) (1 course): Students of the current generation are pressing for a greater share of responsibility in their education. We believe that they benefit significantly from situations where the burden of responsibility for learning something is explicitly shifted to them. The SIE requirement is a way of institutionalizing this belief.

We are asking the student to use his imagination and to plan a course for which he signs a contract with a sponsoring professor. It is his responsibility to fulfill the terms of that contract and to learn something.

There is no particular mold which the SIE courses will conform to: for some it may be an internship with a Mayor or City Manager; for others, it may be an effort at interpreting a work experience; for others, it may consist of writing an original theatre production and presenting it in public schools.

Our students have done a number of things like this in years past. We are now breaking down the rigid and self-imposed boundary that artificially confines learning to the classroom and recognizes the varied contexts in which significant learning can actually take place.

These are the five courses that a student must take; he will of course, continue to do four years of academic work and will doubtless take many of the same courses that students have always taken at Morningside. However, he will be doing so in the future because of a joint decision he reaches with an advisor. And this means, of course, that our advising system at Morningside must be improved.

We are creating a course description booklet for students, which will give them detailed descriptions of the courses they might wish to take. In the past, both students and advisors have made their choices with too limited information.

The enlarged realm of choice must be supplemented with better information if the freedom is to be of educational benefit to the student.

CHANGES IN GRADING SYSTEM

Morningside has made some significant changes here which will doubtless provoke no less controversy and passion than the present system.

I. A, B, C, D, N: A letter grading system has been retained, but the "F" has been abolished. A student who does failing work will receive an "N" (no credit) instead. The N will not have numerical value of zero as the F did, and hence will not affect the student's grade point average.

"This job has a lot of variety. It makes the time go fast." These are the words of Ray Winneke, Morningside's Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds for 24 years.

Anyone watching the versatile Winneke carrying out the duties of his multi-faceted job would agree that plenty of variety is afforded. The hours aren't the best, however, because the duties range from spending most of Sunday setting up the gym for registration to making a trip to the boys' dorm at midnight to unplug a toilet.

Although the days of long trips to the airport to fix plumbing or paint walls are over, Mr. Winneke's work still involves rental housing. Many homes surrounding the campus are college property and the headaches that go along with home ownership are often passed on to the chief custodian. Among the more common headaches: furnaces that go out, pipes that leak, windows that are broken, storm doors that blow off, even a bat in the house.

Morningside's on-campus residents have their problems, too, and even though custodians are assigned to the

The department's fleet of vehicles includes a one-ton truck, pick-up, jeep, station wagon and two tractors. About a dozen lawn mowers must also be kept in good order. The jeep has another function—it is equipped with a two-way radio and is used to patrol the campus at night, its driver using the radio to communicate with a base station in Lewis Hall.

In purchasing supplies to stock his janitors' storerooms, Mr. Winneke deals in astounding volumes. For instance—his staff uses 180 gallons of floor wax per year and spreads eight

Ray Winneke / A Profile

The responsibilities of the buildings and grounds superintendent have grown remarkably since Mr. Winneke came on the job in 1947. As this writer sat in his small office in the maintenance building amid the whirl of a table saw and the constant ringing of the telephone, Morningside's chief maintenance man told about those changes.

"When I started, we had a staff of ten people. There were two custodians for the girls' dorm, two for main hall, one in the gym, one for the barracks, a lady for the conservatory of music (Charles City College Hall), a carpenter, a yardman, and, of course, Mr. Greer."

The legendary William Greer was then a youthful 72 and functioned as the chief engineer. He went on to work at the college past the age of 90.

"Jones Hall of Science was just being built when I arrived," Winneke said. "My office was in the college's pick-up truck. I kept my building keys in the glove compartment."

Maintaining the buildings on campus was not the task it is now. Missing from the scene were Allee Gym, Roadman Hall, the Eppley Fine Arts building, Klinger-Neal Theatre, the Commons Student Center, the International House and the Fraternity Complex.

"We did have some interesting off-campus maintenance problems," Winneke reflected. He referred to a group of 64 apartments at the Sioux City Airbase owned by the College from 1947-51. Students who served in World War II occupied the Apartments along with some faculty members and administrators.

residence halls, there are times when the chief is called in also to deal with a crisis. "Our biggest problem in the dorms is people who lock themselves out of their rooms," Ray says. "A master key can usually get them back in, but sometimes they have lost their key and we must change the lock and make another key."

Winneke's custodial and maintenance staff now numbers 31, although not all are full-time employees. Students in the federal work-study program augment the maintenance force, especially at Allee Gym and the Commons.

tons of fertilizer on the campus green.

The telephone in the maintenance chief's small office is constantly jangling, usually bringing word of another problem. Mr. Winneke can't escape the relentless ringing at home, either, since maintenance problems have no respect for an eight-hour day. "I feel sorry for my wife (Alice)," Ray says. "Once I was gone for a time in the evening, and she answered six phone calls from people looking for me. I guess you could call her my unofficial secretary."

Gayle Knief went to Morningside with the idea of playing basketball. After all, the Schleswig, Iowa athlete was on a basketball scholarship and he had played only one year of high school football-his senior campaign.

But in the end, Knief, a two-time all-North Central Conference football star and a three year standout on the basketball court, chose the hard grind of professional football. Now Gayle and his wife, the former Diane McClintock of Mason City, also a Morningsider, are "wintering out" the off season on the Knief family farm six miles north of Deloit, Iowa.

Gayle is now with the Boston Patriots of the American Conference of the National Football League in case you haven't heard. He is also the holder of several rather small but important distinctions: Gayle is the highest scoring professional football player ever to come from (1.) Morningside College, and (2.) the corn country of Schleswig.

He is in fact the only known Morningsider to play in a regular season NFL Football game. Several Morningsiders have played in exhibition contests with NFL or AFL teams in the past but no one had made the active list in a season until now.

Knief's journey to the NFL started in high school at Schleswig. He was a top basketball player and a natural athlete but could not talk his mother into letting him play football until his senior year. He then moved on to Morningside where he was a starter on the freshman basketball team. He passed up football that fall but in the spring, he decided to try the grid sport again. He lettered as a sophomore and then earned All-League honors the following two years as a split end.

The Vikings contacted him the day after the 1968 annual player draft and asked him if he would like to try out for the team. He signed a contract with the Vikings as a free agent just prior to the opening of drills in 1968.

When training camp was over he was placed on the taxi squad, where he was to spend all of the exhibition games in 1969 because he was doing his active duty stint in the National Guard at Fort Knox, Kentucky.

Knief was the only free agent to make the Vikings' final 47-man roster when he was a rookie. Forty-four hopefuls attended the rookie camp in 1968 and only seven survived the final cuts.

After being cut at the beginning of the regular football season this year, Knief went to Atlanta and then joined the Patriots for the final five weeks of the season. In his first game against Miami, Knief scored.

He came into the Patriots' offensive lineup with 2:18 remaining in the game and with the big crowd on its way out of the Orange Bowl. The Dolphins were leading, 37-18.

"We wanted to see what he could do," Pats coach John Mazur said. "He looked pretty good in practice and we wanted to see what he would look like in a game situation."

What Mazur saw, he liked.

"We threw him two passes and he caught both of them," the Pats coach said. "He couldn't have done much better unless we'd thrown him 10 and he caught all 10."

The second pass went for 22 yards and the Pats' final touchdown.

"We contacted him," Mazur said. "We'd heard about him. Yes, Joe Kapp had said some things." And so, three years after he started playing professional football, Gayle Knief made his debut. And it was a success.

Gayle sums it up this way, "I learned and next year with a full training camp, I think I'll be better. Some of the guys here now are going to stay and some are going to go. I want to be one that stays."

SPORTS RECAP . . .

by GEORGE ELLIS, Sports Information Director

BASKETBALL

When coach Chuck Obye started the 1970-71 campaign, it was with a note of cautious optimism. The squad listed only one returning starter from a year ago, Rick Weaver, a 6-0 guard from Sioux City East.

Weaver was the sparkplug to the squad. The scrappy junior led the Chiefs through a 7-15 campaign. Despite the losing record, the Chiefs were in the league race most of the way. Morningside held the early lead in the conference with a 2-1 record after victories over Northern Iowa (73-58) and Mankato State (74-73). They were still in third with a 3-2 mark when the home stretch of the season came.

The Chiefs, however, could only win one contest of the final nine and dropped tough, close decisions to conference champion North Dakota State (74-73), Mankato State (66-64), and North Dakota (74-62). The league mark finished at 4-10 but could have easily been 7-7 or better with a few right bounces.

The optimistic point is that the Chiefs will return the entire squad for the 1971-72 season. Lost midway through the season due to an injury, 6-9 center Russ Overaas has had surgery to repair arm damage and should be at full strength for the next campaign. His absence was undoubtedly a big factor in the final drive.

Weaver topped all the Morningside scorers and was named to the 2nd Team All-NAIA District 15 basketball team. Although the All-Conference selections have not been released yet, Weaver is expected to be on the honor unit.

Sophomore Bruce Jenkins topped all rebounders with 180 grabs. He was followed closely by freshman Scott Burgason (6-5½) from Ames with 154 rebounds. Juniors Doug Nelson and Von Bornholtz finished second and third in the scoring race with 13.5 and 12.2 averages respectively.

The Chiefs collected victories over Westmar, Washington University of Missouri, Mankato State (twice), Augustana (twice) and UNI. They finished fourth in the annual North Central Conference basketball tournament.

Rick Weaver, a two-year starter for Coach Chuck Obye's Maroon Chief Basketball squad, was named the recipient of the Liston Award of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics in early March. Rick, leading scorer for the Chiefs this year, received his recognition at the tip-off banquet of the NAIA national basketball tournament in Kansas City.

The Liston Award, named for the late Emil S. Liston who founded the NAIA, is awarded to just one player annually and recognizes not only outstanding athletic achievement but scholastic performance and campus leadership as well.

Rick Weaver is as adept in the classroom as he is on the basketball floor. Named to Morningside's Dean's List of scholars during each of his five completed semesters, Rick has earned a perfect grade average for three of those semesters.

Showing quick moves and a deadly outside shot, Weaver tallied 352 points during the 1970-71 basketball season, averaging 16 per game. His career high was 30 in the Chiefs' 99 to 93 win over Augustana. He also led his team in free throw shooting accuracy and is considered one of the finest defensive players in the North Central Conference.

Junior basketball players from the 558 schools of the NAIA were eligible for the award.

WRESTLING

The fourth winning season in the last five years highlighted the 1970-71 Morningside wrestling season. The Chiefs charted a 9-7-1 dual meet chart and finished second in two tournaments.

Three Morningside wrestlers entered the top 10 all-time winningest mat list. Lindsay Eckerman (167-158 lbs.) charted a 17-9-2 record up to the national tournament and is in fifth place with 39 career wins.

Rick Nuss at 126 posted an excellent 17-4 season mark, and the sophomore is eighth with 31 career victories. He has a good chance at overhauling Denny Christenson's 62 wins. Heavyweight Dave Reeder now has 25 career wins to enter the top 10 in 10th spot. He is 12-11 for the season.

But probably the top effort of the season has come from Larry Bolanos. A JC transfer from Muscatine, Bolanos finished second in the NCC wrestling tournament and has a fine 18-7 record going into the national meet. He wrestled at 134 & 126. Jerry Sherwood finished 15-11 at 177 for the other big Morningside effort.

BASEBALL

Coach Dick Weikert, taking the reins from Don Protexter who took a leave of absence, will lead the Chiefs in a strenuous 29-game schedule this season. A 6-game road trip to Kansas and Missouri starts the season and a home game against Westmar is included in the non-conference schedule.

Highlights of the season include a 20-game NCC conference schedule and a night doubleheader against Creighton University in Rosenblatt Stadium in Omaha.

The southern swing includes games against Kansas State at Emporia, William Jewell, and Missouri Western.

The Chiefs list just five lettermen returning. They are pitchers Dave Andros and Bob Paton, outfielders John Loughman and Mike Pommerenke, and infielder Lee Westergaard.

"Project Awareness" Surveys Drug Scene . . .

Concern over the increasing incidence of drug abuse is the driving force behind "Project Awareness," a venture of Morningside College students and one of their professors, Dr. Earl Moore, chairman of the psychology department.

The aim of the project is to develop materials and programs that will inform people of all age groups about the drug culture. Presently some 15 students are involved in the program.

The program grew out of a study of the drug scene undertaken by members of Dr. Moore's class in adolescent psychology during the first semester of this academic year. Many students of that class became so involved in their study of drug abuse that they decided to continue their special project, hoping to draw more interested students into the program.

Only one of the students involved is a psychology major, and the group has found that the variety of majors being pursued by its members has been beneficial to the study. For instance, a biology major is working on physical damage to the body resulting from drug misuse while a pre-law student is researching the legal aspects of drug possession and sale.

"Our purpose is to uncover facts about drug usage and to convey them in such a way that they give people a clear perception of the problems involved," according to Dennis Gross, the project co-ordinator. Gross, a junior from Sioux City, speaks with obvious enthusiasm in discussing the findings of Project Awareness.

Communication is the key to solving drug problems, Gross asserts, and many of the mass media techniques now being employed do not communicate with the young drug user or potential user. "It is our judgment," Gross said, "that most of the radio and television announcements and the printed material on drugs miss the mark by 'talking down' to their audiences or using ineffective scare tactics."

Dr. Moore, in speaking to a group of high school counselors recently, said that many of the broadcast announcements were about as effective "as talking to a 20-year-old about his retirement." The announcements, he said, used terms that young people didn't understand and attempted to develop fears that the young listener considered unbelievable.

The Morningside group is now in the process of formulating broadcast spots and printed material that they feel will speak to the young in their language and will motivate them to think about all the aspects of drug usage.

"Our approach is non-judgmental," says student Gross. "We attempt to set out facts clearly so that the kids can see the problems for themselves. We also want to show that there are enough real highs in life to make the artificial euphoria of a drug trip unnecessary."

Communication through the mass media and literature is not the only concern of Project Awareness, however. The group is developing programs to present before groups of all ages and a counseling service where people can "talk out" their drug problems. Other projects are crossword puzzles using the vocabulary of the drug culture, a glossary of drug terminology, and a bibliography of books, magazines and films concerning the problem.

Perhaps the most important aspect of the project is the expertise in drug problems that will be available to the communities in which the students make their homes after graduation. Each member of the group will take to his new community a comprehensive notebook including summaries of the major findings of the group and materials to be used in a community drug information program.

Summing up the findings of Project Awareness, Dr. Moore said: "We find that we must change the value system. The language, the literature, the music of the young generation suggests that you're not really living unless you're turned on with drugs. We want young people to prove to themselves that drugs are not basic to living and that there are much better ways to 'turn on.'"

A team of scholars representing Tau Kappa Epsilon, Psi Chi, and the honorary society for psychology, began the competition, program of the same name, in early October. The Key and Lass, scholastic honoraries, shared the running the competition. ## BUSINESS DEPARTMENT DRAWS ON COMMUNITY TALENT...

Morningside's Department of Business Administration has brought executives from Sioux City businesses onto the campus to consult with professors and students in the department. A recently-formed advisory committee meets on a regular basis to "generate ideas, form concepts, find new ways of doing things," according to Prof. Dwight Packard, chairman of the committee.

The committee's suggestions are considered in the updating of department course offerings. One innovation already underway is the use of local executives as guest lecturers in classes dealing with their specialties.

THEATRE DEPARTMENT IS BUSY...

Presentations in the Klinger-Neal theatre since the start of the new year have ranged from opera to Shakespeare. The opera was first—"Merry Wives of Windsor," a lighthearted work of Otto Nicolai, presented on Jan. 21-23. Working on a small budget, directors Prof. Frederick Walter and Dr. James Wood turned out a highly-acclaimed production which played to capacity houses.

The opera was based on a Shakespeare play and preceded a seldom-performed work of the master, "Measure for Measure." The play was presented in February and was done in an unusual, modernistic setting. It was favorably reviewed.

To complete the theatre activity, Prof. Lyle Fisher directed a troupe of Morningside actors in a delightful presentation of the classic "Where's Charley," the musical version of "Charley's Aunt." The company performed three nights a week for four weeks in an experiment in dinner theatre at a South Sioux City convention facility.

Cynthia Appley of Akron, Iowa and John Van Ausdall of East Moline, Ill., perform in the presentation of Shakespeare's "Measure for Measure" by Morningside's drama department.

Miss Cindy Irwin, a Morningside freshman from Sioux City, has been chosen "Queen of the River" for the 1971 Sioux City Rivercade. Cindy is the daughter of Mr. ('51) and Mrs. (ex-'52) Charles Irwin of Sioux Center, Ia.

Debate Project Grows...

Morningside's debate team met with good success in competition in major debates. The team of Michael Ellwanger of Sioux City and Michael Neu of Urbandale, Ia. compiled 40 wins and were selected to compete in the regional qualifying tournament at which a team will be selected to compete in the national tourney.

Ellwanger and Neu also debated the University of Southern California team — one of the best in the nation — on an hour-long telecast on KCAU-TV. The match was not judged, but appeared to professional observers to be a near stand-off.

The Southern California team was on campus to participate in the first Morningside College Debate Tournament. They went home with the championship trophy. Ellwanger and Neu were not eligible to participate in their own school's tournament.

Meanwhile, the Morningside freshmen team of Jerry Foxhoven and Terry Wright were walking off with honors too. The two graduates of Yankton, S. D., high school compiled an excellent record and won the championship trophy of the Flint Hills Tournament at Kansas State Teachers College.

The conviction of the Central Planning Committee was that the F imposed too severe a penalty on the student who failed. Not only did the student lose the time and money (which he will lose under the new system as well), but he was burdened with a zero in his GPA which had the power to affect him adversely many years beyond the date of the failing course.

We have students, for example, who start college before they are ready, fail courses during their freshman year and then drop out for a few years of service or work. When they return, no matter how well-motivated and academically successful they are, they must bear the heavy consequences of earlier failure.

Some students have to spend extra semesters of work (after getting the total of hours required for graduation) in trying to get B's or A's which are required to balance out F's (so that they can graduate with a 2.0 average). This seems so punitive as to resemble prison life more than "the life of the mind." We believe that students should be judged by their achievements rather than their failures and don't believe that such permanently punitive aspects of failing grades can be justified.

2. Pass-No Credit Option: In the future the student will be allowed to take up to one course per semester (outside the major or minor) on a Pass or "No Credit" basis. We are trying to encourage students to explore intellectually without the fear of making bad grades.

It is, of course, possible that students will avail themselves of the opportunity for the purpose of loafing. The actual effect of the policy will have to be assessed to determine whether exploration is actually taking place.

3. Conversion of Current Students: One controversial aspect of the new grading system concerns its application to current students. In order to place all of the students at Morningside on the same basis so far as the computation of grade point averages is concerned, any transfer student or current student who has an F in his record will have that F computed as if it were an N. The F won't be removed, but its numerical assignment of zero in the computation will be eliminated.

We came to this decision because of our reasoning that the F has been too punitive and because of our desire to treat all students the same. If we did not do so, students who received N's next year would be treated less severely than those who received F's this year or last year.

In taking this step, we don't think that we are lowering our standards for these reasons:

First, a student must still pass 120 hours of academic work (1/3 of which must be in junior and senior level courses). N's will not count toward graduation.

Second, students will still have to pass most of their courses to be retained; an Academic Progress Committee will review the student's record to determine whether it is worth his time to continue in school. Students will doubtless be asked to leave for academic reasons.

It may happen, that some students will graduate in the future who would not have otherwise graduated if they had been saddled with the punitive aspects of the F; but if we require them to pass 120 hours of work with a "C" average, we have preserved a meaningful academic standard for graduation.

THE FUTURE

You will doubtless continue to read in The Morningsider about other aspects of our new curriculum. Space does not permit us to discuss every feature of our academic program.

We realize we are not entering a golden age in which our problems will disappear. We are rather exchanging one set of problems for another, hoping that the new ones will be laden with more educational possibilities than the old. We would like to be known by the quality of the educational problems we choose to live with, rather than pretending not to have any.

Some of our beautiful theories about what will afford the most meaningful education for our students will be felled by some not-so-beautiful facts. But we have not created an educational pattern for an eternity. We will be looking at ourselves much more closely in the future than we have in the past and will, as a result, continue to modify our program to meet changing educational needs.

Fortunately, Ray lives only a block and a half from the campus. He now has some company when he leaves for work in the morning. The Winnekes' son, Greg, is a freshman at Morningside.

Throughout the 24 years he has held his Morningside post, Ray Winneke has kept a daily record of the jobs he has undertaken and the time it took to complete them. Glancing through the diary, one comes upon some interesting entries, such as "stayed up all night working on the furnace at Eppley."

A longtime member of Grace United Methodist Church, Ray admits that he sometimes lets his job get in the way of church attendance. "I always make the rounds of the buildings Sunday morning," he says. "I check the boilers and the heating plants and fix some things I don't get a chance to work on during the week. Sometimes I chat with my janitors who live at Eppley, and the gym and the Commons. I'll get done and see that its noon already."

He had some special church duties during a three-year period following the fire that destroyed the old Grace church in 1958. While the new structure was being built, services were held in Klinger Forum on the second floor of Lewis Hall. This meant setting up for church and opening up the building early on Sunday mornings.

At the age of 53, Ray Winneke reflects warmly upon his 24 years with the College. How does he manage to put up with a never-ending succession of plugged plumbing, broken windows, cold furnaces, rush jobs and infrequent thanks that go along with the title of Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds. "I guess it gets in your blood," he says.

MINISTER'S SEMINAR HELD IN JANUARY . . .

Ministers of many faiths attended the Ministers' Seminar held in early January under the sponsorship of the College's Department of Religion. Clergymen from five states met at the Commons to discuss papers written on the theme "The Individual and Community in Rapid Change." The Randolph Room served as conference headquarters.

Dr. Robert Jewett was director of the seminar.

Sioux City Shares

In Morningside

Sioux City businessmen will be calling on their fellow businessmen in late March and April in behalf of Morningside college in a program titled "Sioux City Shares in Morningside." The aim is to generate greater participation on the part of Sioux City's business leaders in the annual fund and the activities of the College.

Chairman of the Sioux City drive is Neal Tennis, president of the Morningside State Bank and the Pioneer Valley Savings Bank of Sargeant Bluff, Iowa. Mr. Tennis has been in the banking business for over 20 years and has headed the Sioux City facility since 1963. He is prominent in Sioux City civic affairs and active in many banking organizations. Mr. Tennis' late father and mother were both Morningsiders.

Mr. Tennis will lead an organization of volunteer workers who will ask their friends to join in supporting Morningside. Sioux City area alumni will join the effort by conducting a telephone campaign.

Schroeder Receives

Two Honors

Special recognition in two areas has come to Steve Schroeder who will graduate with the Class of '71. Steve was selected by the Sioux City Jaycees as the city's Outstanding Young Religious Leader. Earlier, Steve was named by his football teammates as the squad's Most Valuable Player for the 1970 season.

Steve serves as a Sunday School teacher and usher at the Morningside Presbyterian Church. He also holds once-a-week meetings at Grace United Methodist Church involving Morningside students.

On the football field, Steve excelled as a pass catcher and set a career school record for receptions. He was named to the North Central Conference All-Conference team.

Buckingham in NAIA Hall of Fame

A. W. Buckingham ('39), Vice President for Estate Planning and for many years active in Morningside's athletic program, was inducted into the Hall of Fame of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics on March 12 in Kansas City. The honor is the highest that can be bestowed by the NAIA and is accorded only to those persons who have achieved national prominence in athletics.

Mr. Buckingham is the only person ever to have been involved in the NAIA at every possible level. He played in the first of the association's basketball tournaments, later coached teams that played in the national tourney, became a district chairman, an executive committee member and finally national president of the NAIA.

A. W. Buckingham ('39) and Mrs. Buckingham (Marian Miller, '42) hold the plaque that will be displayed in the NAIA Hall of Fame.

A factor in Mr. Buckingham's selection to the Hall of Fame was the contribution he has made to the United States Olympic program. He is a member of the board of directors of the Olympic Committee and has been named chairman of the housing committee for this year's Pan American games and next year's Olympic games.

He has also played an important role in the development of the United States Collegiate Sports Council and was Chief of the Mission for last fall's University Games in Italy.

The ceremony in which Mr. Buckingham was formally inducted into the Hall of Fame took place at the Hillyard Hall of Fame Luncheon, held annually in conjunction with the NAIA Basketball Tournament.

Big Weekend for Parents

Parents of Morningside students are being invited to share in campus life during a special weekend of activity on April 23 and 24. A joint committee of students and parents is planning the events of the weekend. Student committee members are Linda Liljegren ('71) and Rick Weaver ('72) who are the co-chairmen, Mark Brosamle ('71), Cheryl Everson ('72), John Herbst ('72), Terry Huseth ('71), and Janna Pfeil ('72). Parents serving on the committee are Mr. and Mrs. Delmar Bainbridge of Kingsley, Iowa, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dannenberg, Mrs. Antoinette Everson, Mrs. and Mrs. Richard Johnson, Mrs. and Mrs. Dwight Packard and Mr. and Mrs. William Spornitz, all of Sioux City.

The events will begin with the Honors Convocation on Friday, April 23, at 10 a.m. in the Eppley Auditorium. Mothers of female students will accompany their daughters to the annual Agora Mother-Daughter Banquet Friday evening at 6 o'clock.

Also Friday evening, parents may attend the performance of the play "Italian Straw Hat" at the Klinger-Neal theatre at a reduced rate.

Saturday's events will start with a 9 a.m. coffee hour where parents may browse with students and faculty members. At 10:15 a special Parents Weekend convocation featuring student talent will be presented on the Eppley stage. Dr. Thompson will present brief remarks, as will student body president Edward Jacobson and Mr. Bainbridge, representing the Parents' Council.

On Saturday afternoon parents may enjoy the baseball doubleheader with Augustana College beginning at noon. Open house will also be held at campus housing facilities on Saturday afternoon.

The annual Father-Son banquet will be held at 6:30 on Saturday evening to round out the weekend's affairs.

Despite the apparent lack of experience, pitching depth appears to be very good with strong help coming from a host of good freshmen. Hitting should be improved and the fielding looks good with strong reserves from last year on hand to fill the holes.

TRACK

Probably the best track outlook in recent years will greet the return of coach Bud Brockman from a year's leave of absence. Brockman will have 60-yard dash flash Dick Keith on hand to lead the way. Keith is a 9.7 sprinter and has gone 6.4 in the 60. Ace hurdler and 440-yard dash man Mickey Everett will be back to improve on his 49.0 clocking in the 440, and he could be considered the favorite in both the 440 and intermediate hurdles in the conference track meet.

Pole vaulter Dean Pettit soared 14-6 and promises to be one of the best vaulters in the NCC or, for that matter, in the nation. High Jumper Scott Harding has gone 6-5 and long jumper Mark Bigler has gone 23-3.

Early results from indoor meets show that the relay teams will be strong and that the Chiefs, while lacking depth to be a league contender, will be as tough individually as any team in the North Central Conference.
