MUSIC FESTIVAL HELD IN GRACE CHURCH

The "All-American" spring music festival, sponsored by the Morningside College Conservatory, opened Friday evening, May 6, with an all-vocal program featuring choral numbers by a 125-voice group under the baton of Paul MacCollin, and solo appearances by Milo Hall, tenor; Elizabeth MacCollin, soprano; Donald Kelsey, tenor, and Roanne Cooper, soprano.

Friday evening's concert brought enthusiastic applause for the song compositions of a Sioux Cityan, Charles Garland, who heads the music theory department at Morningside College. Prof. Garland's works were sung effectively by Mr. Hall, tenor.

The Saturday evening program continued with an instrumental program featuring seven leading Sioux City musicians who, because of the press of other activities, seldom have the time for solo appearances.

All of these soloists are recognized as masters of their chosen instruments, and several are key performers in the Sioux City symphony. One, Leo Kucinski, violinist, is conductor of that symphony, as well as director of Monahan post band.

Another, James Reistrup, pianist, is a composer in his own right, as well as being recognized as one of the state's leading piano instructors.

Others equally well known who were heard, are Elizabeth Ollivier, cellist; Robert Lowry, clarinetist; Hans Lampl, pianist; Rosalyn Ames, oboist, and Harold Wright, bassoon player.

Miss Ames played a rhapsody for oboe and string orchestra, titled, The Winter's Past, a composition of Wayne Barlow; Miss Ollivier played Bolero, by Klara Robbins.

The festival was concluded Sunday night with an oratorio based on Negro spiritual themes for chorus and orchestra, and a tone poem for women's voices and orchestra, both under Prof. MacCollin's direction.

GYM PROGRESSES RAPIDLY

Athletic Director Buckingham reports that work on the gymnasium has been moving along rapidly since the ground breaking ceremonies on April 6. At present one fifth of the construction actually has been completed and by Commencement the first story walls should be well along.

COLLEGE REVIVES SCIENCE EVENT

Morningside College held its first engineering and science exhibit since the war at 8 p. m. Thursday evening, April 28th.

Sponsored by the departments of the Jones Hall of Science, the exhibit was designed for the general public and brought to Sioux City outstanding demonstrations in the scientific fields.

Of special interest was a television demonstration obtained in cooperation with radio station KTRI from International News Service in New York and a completely equipped weather bureau set up in the Jones Hall especially for the show.

Of interest to the farming community was an extensive agricultural demonstration of radio-active soil tracing brought from Iowa State College, Ames.

Other exhibits included a complete crime detection laboratory and an operating radar set. There also were demonstrations in electronics, photography, and latest developments in plastics, and exhibits of the latest X-ray equipment and aeronautics developments.

Before World War II the science exhibit was an annual feature at Morningside. It now is being revived as a permanent part of the college's program.

FACULTY WHO'S WHO

Miss Marcia McNee, Professor of Elementary Education at Morningside, has been an active force in the training of young women interested in elementary teaching and greatly responsible for the excellent record of good work done by this group in northwest Iowa for the past thirteen years. Before coming to Morningside College, Miss McNee taught at Upper Iowa University in the field of elementary education and served as acting Dean of Women there for several years. Since coming to Morningside College, she not only has devoted her time to teaching but also through community activities and participation in professional organizations stimulated such interest in teacher training at Morningside that through her the college has become known as a source for well-trained and dependable elementary teachers. Miss McNee holds membership in Phi Lambda Theta, honorary education fraternity; Delta Kappa Gamma, honorary organization for achievement in teaching and many other organizations including the National Association, Iowa State Educational Association, American Association of University Women, National Council of Social Studies, Association of Childhood Education, Chapter JG, P. E. O. Sisterhood and the Sioux City Woman's Club.

"We Gladly Teach" was given by Miss McNee before the state meeting of Delta Kappa Gamma in Sioux City in 1947. This article since has been published in The Sounding Board, the Iowa Classroom Teachers' Association paper, and whether you teach or not, it is well worth reading for its viewpoint on the solution of school problems and its happy philosophy concerning the teaching profession. The Morningsider gladly publishes it and hopes you will enjoy it.

"We Gladly Teach"

A student-teacher who was filling out her application for student-teaching last fall wrote, as her reason for wanting to teach, "My mother says I need my head examined." The exceedingly serious situation in teacher shortages makes that remark seem not a mere witticism, but one with grave connotations for the future of education. The common solution to the existing situation seems to be the economic one; but the problem is much more deep-seated than that in many ways. Someone has expressed it thus: "What we need most is not so much to realize the ideal as to idealize the real." "To accentuate the positive" is another constructive point of view. We must reach the point where we realize that we gladly teach.

No thinking person would attempt to deny the serious need of increases in salaries for teachers to a level above that of charwomen and janitors in our schools. Problems of tenure and retirement now are discussed not only by the teaching profession, but also by the common man on street corners and over the radio. "Money makes the mare go" is probably receiving definite application to our schools by more people than ever before in the history of our nation. Education is too important in a democracy for a nation with financial resources like ours to treat these problems lightly.

The materialistic philosophy of the world makes these matters of major concern to us all. Teachers cannot be retained in the profession nor can teacher recruitment be accomplished satisfactorily if attention is not given to the costs of living, educational-preparation costs, etc. Yet research in industry shows that "Pay has a surprisingly low rank in the scale of values" where the morale of the worker is concerned. Obviously, then, other factors are important.

Miss Marcia McNee

Society is definitely responsible for certain group attitudes that are serious in their effects on the teaching profession. The teacher is made the subject for jest in too many newspaper cartoons, movies, and books to make the picture a flattering one for students to emulate. Barzun in his book, TEACHERS IN AMERICA, states that "Teaching is not a lost art, but the regard for it is a lost tradition." Communities are themselves also responsible to a great degree for the fact that the teachers are so segregated from the life of the community and its normal associations. Placing college and university teachers on a special pedestal definitely deflates the ego of those who attempt the really fundamental foundation work at the primary level. If society gives first-ranking importance to any level of whole-hearted and genuine performance in teaching, there will be much less tendency for teachers to be apologetic about their teaching positions. The teachers themselves realize the significance of their work but tend to be deflated by the reactions of society.

The special taboos for teachers seem to make the prospect of teaching definitely uninteresting to our young people. A recent survey in college classes showed that twenty-five out of forty-one spontaneously mentioned these two ideas as fundamental ways to make teaching more attractive to young people: "a chance to be human" and "a chance really to be a definite part of the community and not segregated as 'teachers'". Over-emphasis on the idea of being a personal example also bothers youth and in teachers it often produces a sense of frustration, because frailties are realized by an individual more often than he confesses. Teaching as a life-career is completely opposed to the desires any normal girl has for her life. Showing girls how their training and experience in teaching can offer real contributions to home-life is a very positive approach to the problem for them.

Current philosophies make the situation difficult not only for these prospective candidates for teaching, but also for those in the profession. Emphasis on school, degrees, and honors rather than on real education disgusts keen adolescents who have deeper insight concerning the intellectual inadequacies of many of their teachers. Our changes in the pattern of family living tend to make the service motive less strong even for adults. The limitations in child population and the restricted environments in which families must live tend to make children less attractive to all. This is especially true for youth who grow up in living quarters which are more inadequate because children are not accepted in certain types of housing facilities. Our constant hurrying existence, our congestion in population, and perhaps our standard of being unwilling to do anything without definite monetary or other type of return to us seem all to work to make us less genuinely interested in people, either in general or as individuals. Those who lack this interest have no genuine urge to teach and should not do so unless they can build such an urge. Real teachers gladly teach.

Wrong values are being broadcast constantly by adults, many of whom are pitiable objects in their clinging to some spurious value. It is smart to demand to be taken care of, to get something for nothing, to get something without offering equivalent value to the purchaser, and to expect an easy life as one's right. Our standard of "soft living" and our emphasis on security are not truly innate tendencies of our youth, and they do not lead to desire to work or to pioneer in a work of service. Teaching must always be a work of service if really vital values for children are to be achieved. I repeat, however, that the children will not catch these values unless teachers feel and know what these real values are. "What you are shouting so loud I can't hear what you say" is a well-known truism.

The home and parents have particular and peculiar responsibilities for the exodus from the teaching profession and the lack of interest on the part of likely recruits. Discipline problems, lack of willingness to work, and boredom with school are often the product of our theory, now ante-dated, that complete freedom is psychologically good for children and also of the idea that hard things come soon enough to them and so they should be shielded as long as possible. Adverse criticism of teachers in the home and parental interference at school may not only affect teachers seriously but make the children themselves avoid the profession even when these children seemed to profit by the results of this criticism! That parents tend either to be indifferent to teaching as a vocation for their children or to be actively opposing such vocational choices is an all-too-evident pattern in this period of our national history.

The teaching profession must realize that some of the personal responsibility for the crisis should be laid at its own doors. Teaching has not been 100% efficient and children have suffered in many ways. Just paying teachers more money is not an adequate solution to the problem. We must work out better bases of evaluation of our teaching, both by our supervisors and by the teachers themselves. A definite and basic necessity for real growth is to see one's strengths and weaknesses, strengthen the former and eliminate the latter. At present achievement is not really certain until too long after the teachers have done their best. Wrong types of supervision all too often produce constant fear or a feeling of degradation in teachers. People who do things must expect some adverse criticism, however, and many teachers need to be reminded of this fact. There are problems in any job and professional work of any type is truly never done. Punching a time-clock may keep a teacher in the building but it is by no means any assurance that the person is anything more than a routine worker. The importance of the job is an essential attitude for a real teacher. Teachers must feel that they are dynamic, creative forces in civilization, and that no one else has a more important task in terms of human good than they.

Probably these ideas do not "accentuate the positive" as much as any thinking person could wish. Many constructive suggestions have been publicized, but we need further implementation of them for real usefulness. Propaganda showing the importance of teaching and teachers in terms of their real worth must be presented until people catch the spirit of it; then salaries and working conditions will improve and the profession will be honored. Sentimental approaches appeal less positively to the ordinary person and to youth because they suggest superficial and spurious values. Our own discontent and "griping" can boomerang very badly on our profession. In our own memories of wonderful teachers we find those who loved to teach rather than the malcontents. We should really be glad to teach.

Actual efficiency of our teachers and schools must be greatly increased in many ways. After better standards of evaluation are set up, we must eliminate our less effective and worthless teachers and provide pensions for those past their valuable years. We must devise standards for the selection of healthy-minded, hard-working young people with emotional stability in the face of disappointments and difficult tasks. Society must help to keep them stable by seeing that they have adequate, happy surroundings, both in and out of school, similar to those of the society in which they need to live.

We need more appreciation for services rendered, more constructive criticism and a spirit of willingness to profit by it, more stress on the value of organizations of one's work (because a disorganized person wastes so much time), less sympathy which develops self-pity and an apologetic attitude in the teacher, and more rest and recreation. Fatigue and routine, humdrum living are powerful negative forces in education. Someone has said, "Humdrum is not where you live; it's what you are." Scoring machines and secretarial help to do mimeographing and objective tests, thus relieving the teacher of many routine tasks, would permit the use of the teacher's energies for more constructive purposes in education and would dignify the work as well. Too many teachers now make little use of their initiative and ingenuity because routine tasks consume their time and energy.

In-service education in the form of time and money and stimulation to do reading, to attend summer school and to travel will develop the personality of any individual and offer a marvelous supplement to the best supervision during the school year. The length of the vacation periods in our schools may have pernicious influences toward inefficiency and laziness on the part of teachers if the time is not used for development purposes. Then, too, we must remember that we need some vacation every day if we are to teach gladly and with fresh enthusiasm.

It is obvious that many of these aspects could be cared for, and still a poor situation might obtain in our schools. The profession must select, build, and hold superior personalities whose educational backgrounds, both in and out of school, are greatly improved. Real values in life must be stressed. Over all, a sense of humor and a joy in living must be constantly utilized to meet the stresses and strains of those "irritating intangibles" which are probably always inevitable in any job this side of Heaven. It is imperative that we think and act and direct our energies to improve our situations quickly, for the need is great. The gravity of the situation will be increasingly felt until a large percentage of our teachers can honestly and joyfully say, "We gladly teach".

LEAVE FOR PACIFIC

Mrs. DeWitt N. Morgan (Ruth Hammerstrom, '37), and her children, Michael and Leslie Sue, who have been guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Hammerstrom, 1722 W. Third Street, have left to join Maj. Morgan who is stationed on Okinawa.

MORNINGSIDERS TO TRAVEL IN EUROPE

Miss Rae Wetmore, trustee of Morningside College and former Morningside student, has passage on the Queen Mary to sail from New York July 28 for two months of European travel. Rae spent the holidays last winter in Mexico.

Elsie Jean Woodford, ex'45, of Omaha, Nebr., will sail on May 21 from Montreal, Quebec, on a three months bicycling tour sponsored by the Youth Argosy for educational and vacation purposes. The group will travel through England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Switzerland, Italy, and France. Transportation will be by bus, train, and bicycle.

Louise Gingles, ex'46, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Gingles (Frances Kolp, '18) of Onawa, will be sent with 450 other students to Europe this summer by the Experiment in International Living, Inc., of Putney, Vermont. She will live with a German family working with a group of young people in the interests of friendly and co-operative international living. The latter part of the summer she will travel hostel fashion through the Austrian Alps with those of the group interested in mountain climbing.

COLLEGE MAY QUEEN CROWNED

Miss Bonnie Schrader, freshman, Rudd, Ia., was crowned Morningside College May queen Wednesday evening, May 11, at the intermission of the annual Walkout Day Dance at the Alumni gymnasium.

Miss Schrader's attendants were Miss Nancy Hubbard and Miss Reba Anderson.

The crowning climaxed the student skip day celebration. At 9 a. m. Wednesday the arrival of Walkout Day was announced by the sound of a trumpet outside the main hall. More than 1,000 students "walked out" of classes to participate in the activities.

The day officially opened with a traditional race to the Floyd monument. Men ran the full distance with the women forming relay teams to compete. Jerry Sucre of Panama was awarded first prize in the men's event and the relay team from the Kappa Zeta Chi sorority received a trophy as winners of the girls' race.

At the monument a motorcycle hill climb was staged by students and a "dough hunt" was held in which the students searched the area for hidden $1 bills.

Candidates for offices on next year's student council were introduced and campaign speeches were heard.

Following the speeches a lunch was served by the members of the student council.

AGORA CLUB HONORS MOTHERS

Women students of Morningside College honored their mothers at the annual Mother-Daughter Banquet sponsored by Agora Club Friday night, May 7, at the Mayfair Hotel. Women faculty members and others were guests.

A feature of the banquet program was the introduction of new club officers headed by Miss Helen Ann Bartrum, Sioux City, president.

Principal speaker of the evening was Mrs. Walter W. Barrett (Helen Giehm, '14), of Sioux City. Her talk, titled Second Time Through, was a comparison of college life for girls in 1914 and 1949. She delighted the audience with humorous reminiscences of her college days and of the conduct then approved for the young students.

The speaker's daughter, Miss Ann Barrett, retiring president of Agora, was toastmaster for the program. Miss Bonnie Schraeder of Rudd, Ia., gave a toast to the mothers, and Mrs. John Madison (Anna Beard, '16), of Sioux Falls responded.

Approximately 220 mothers, daughters and guests attended the dinner and program. Miss Alva Tolf, dean of women and club adviser; Mrs. Earl A. Roadman, and Miss Lillian Dimmitt, were special guests.

San Francisco

President Roadman gathered in twenty-six at the Morningside "Get-to-gether", May 6, in San Francisco on his recent swing through California. A dinner was held at Treasure Island Navy Base Officers' Club. It made a more central place for those who drove in from Sacramento, Hayward, Caruthers, San Leandro, San Mateo, and Oakland. Those present in sequence from these places were—Rev. and Mrs. Harry Richards, '08; Leslie Alt, '22; Eugene Stover, '47; Wm. E. Drury, '23, and wife and daughter, Elizabeth (a prospective Morningsider); Mr. ('15) and Mrs. W. H. ("Bill") Payne; and from Oakland, Anna Mae Evans Smith, '16; Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Morrill, ex'21, (Elizabeth Lichtenberg) and Mrs. Lloyd Tye, (Dorothy Johnson, '37), with her husband, who reported having been married by Dr. Roadman.

Clara Lewis, '18, and daughter, Mrs. John Walters from Sausalito, daughter and grand daughter of Bishop Wilson Seeley Lewis, reported that sister Ida (Mrs. Ida Lewis Main), is on her way home from tumultuous China.

Helen Wilson Mossman, '08, who brought her daughter Mariella Wolf (1946 of University of California, L. A. Campus), represented Dr. Frank E. Mossman, distinguished brother-in-law and uncle.

The two members of the class of '08 were the oldest "old timers" and by their right of seniority chose to reminisce in a frivolous strain on a date for an "Otho" banquet in their senior year with their "steadies" away.

However, serious tribute was paid in memory by several to Bishop Lewis and Dr. Mossman and the splendid organization of the present under Dr. Roadman.

Ernest Raun, '23, as Dr. Roadman's associate on the trip, was much enjoyed for his report on the building activities of his committee on the Board of Trustees.

He reported enjoying San Francisco to the maximum in riding the historically famous "Cable Car" up Powell, over "Nob" Hill to Fisherman's Wharf, arriving safely back at the equally famous Palace Hotel whose Garden Court of Gold Rush Days permitted carriages to drive right in.

Those present from San Francisco were Chyrl Cose, '23, and sister, Mrs. Wm. E. Ellis and her husband from Moffet Field; Don S. Hartzell, '27, and wife—who told of being born in the Phillipines and of his childhood in Chile, South America, with his father Rev. Frank (Corwin) Hartzell of 1906.

An organization was effected for future activities with: William H. Payne, president; Mrs. Lloyd Tye, vice president, and Mrs. Helen Mossman, secretary.

—Helen Wilson Mossman, '08

Dr. Myron Insko, '14, executive secretary of Goodwill Industries of San Diego, was elected president of the newly formed San Diego Chapter of the Morningside Alumni Association. Other officers are Chaplain Dan Jordan, '35, USN, vice president, and Mrs. Wesley A. Hatter (Betty Mead, '28), secretary-treasurer. Twenty-four former Morningsiders were present at the meeting at which Dr. Earl Roadman and Ernest Raun were honored guests.

COLLEGE FETES SENIORS

Members of the senior classes of Sioux City high schools were honored Monday afternoon, April 25, at a luncheon and tour of the Morningside College campus. The senior day is held to give the pupils a chance to become better acquainted with the college's facilities, faculty and student body.

A luncheon was served in the patio of Lillian E. Dimmitt Hall, and welcoming addresses were delivered there by Dr. Earl A. Roadman and Dean Thomas E. Tweito.

The 320 pupils who attended were taken on a tour of all the college buildings by Morningside students who are alumni of the Sioux City high schools.

The senior day is sponsored by the faculty and alumni of the college.

COACH ALLEN SPEAKS AT 'M' CLUB'S ANNUAL DINNER-DANCE

Prospects for the 1949-50 football season at Morningside College were discussed briefly by Coach George Allen and other members of the college athletic department at the annual dinner-dance of M Club members. Coach Allen told the athletes and their women guests that Morningside will play 11 games next year, the largest number ever scheduled in a season at the college. Other speakers were Line Coach Bill Pritula, Athletic Director Al Buckingham and Dale Harris, president of M Club.

BOBBY HANSON RECEIVES TROPHY

William B. Danforth, '30, president of the Alumni Association, presented the Alumni Football trophy to Robert Hanson before the Morningside-Buena Vista baseball game under the lights at Soos Park on May 17.

Robert F. Hanson was named the first winner of the Morningside Alumni Trophy for 1949. This trophy will be awarded annually to the athlete (non-letter winner) showing the greatest improvement during the six-weeks of spring football drills. The award is based upon attendance, attitude, ability, and, most of all, improvement.

Hanson's home is in Linn Grove, Iowa.

He is 20 years old and a first-semester sophomore. He spent 18 months in the service as a corporal. He starred in football, basketball and track before enrolling in Morningside College.

The selection of Bob Hanson, the winner, was made by A. W. Buckingham, Director of Athletics and Basketball Coach, George H. Allen, Head Football Coach, and Bill Pritula, Line Coach.

Hanson won over Bob Barks of Orange City, Iowa; Jack Hohs of Evanston, Illinois; Leo Clark of Ypsilanti, Michigan; Ken Bengford of Odebolt, Iowa; and Pat Rydell and Curt Creglow of Rock Rapids.

CLASS NOTES

Word has been received that Marvin Granstrom, '42, who is associated with the Case Institute of Technology, Cleveland, Ohio, as a professor of engineering, recently has been licensed as a professional engineer for the state of Ohio. Barnowe, '39, assistant professor in the College of Business Administration of the University of Washington in Seattle, had a prominent part in a seminar entitled, "How to Get a Job", given for seniors and graduates at the University of Washington. The University of Washington Daily gave the following quotation: Dr. T. J. Barnowe, authority on job hunting, gave his point of view that the attitude of the jobseeker should be that he has something to offer to the firm he wants to work for. He listed three points to aid students in landing jobs. First, make an honest self-appraisal; second, put down on paper everything each knows about himself and list job objectives; third, and above all, be confident."

BASEBALL

The Morningside Maroons ran their victory string to five straight before losing to the Creighton Bluejays in the first game of a doubleheader that was played May 11.

S. D. U.

On May 2, the Maroons traveled to Vermillion and defeated their arch-rivals, 7-4. Bill Enockson, on the mound for the Maroons, held S. D. U. hitless for 5½ innings before the Coyotes found the range. Bill was effective when the chips were down and went on to win his second victory of the season. Joe Custer, Morningside left fielder, led the way at the plate with a triple and two safeties. Bob Horsfall hammered with one on base to supply the rest of the scoring punch.

Omaha

On May 9, the Maroons played host to a fighting Omaha squad and had to come from behind in the bottom of the eighth inning to win, 10-6. It was Bill Enockson who provided the punch when he relieved starter Karl Kletschke in the seventh and set the Indians down with one run. In the last of the seventh Bill blasted a double, driving in two runs to tie the score. In the top of the eighth Omaha went out in front again and the Maroons were forced to hustle to pull the game out of the fire. Enockson, Custer, and Younger were the big guns of the Maroon offense with two safeties apiece. It was Enockson's third victory of the season.

Creighton

On May 11 the Maroons winning streak was snapped at five straight when the Creighton Bluejays won the first game of a doubleheader, 6-4. The losing pitcher was Basil Brock who was very wild most of the way. Larison, Younger, and Enockson provided the Maroon scoring punch.

The second game started out as an airtight pitchers duel but in the home half of the fifth Duane Zimmer blasted a three run homer to break up the game. In the sixth the Maroons scored two runs when the Bluejays committed three errors on the same play. Then, with one man on, Basil Brock smashed a long four bagger. Paul Allen, Maroon portsider, hurled three-hit ball and was credited with the win although he was relieved by Karl Kletschke in the seventh. Zimmer, Callopy, and Brock provided the scoring punch for the Maroons.

Omaha

Friday, May 13, proved to be a bad day for the Maroons who fell victim to an Indian uprising in the eighth inning in a game played at Omaha U. The Indians were victors by a 4-3 margin.

The Maroons outhit Omaha 11 to 6 but missed a run in the first when Joe Custer failed to touch second on a resounding triple by Howard "Mighty Mouse" Harmon.

Buena Vista

On May 18, in a game under the lights at Soos Park, the Maroons delivered the Beaver's second defeat of the season. Big Bill Enockson issued nine hits including a two run homer in the ninth but was effective in the clutches to gain his fourth win of the season.

Morningside's big inning came in the fifth when the Maroons combined two hits, three walks and two errors to run the total to eight. Howard Harmon collected three singles to garner hitting honors for the Maroons.
